

ABSTRACT

Systems and methods are disclosed for controlling an associated circuit. A clock waveform that transitions between normally high and low levels over a cycle in a first operating mode is provided to the associated circuit. The clock waveform is modified to include an intermediate level between the normally high and low levels over a cycle in a second operating mode.